

Careers in manufacturing - where to look next:

National Careers Service: tinyurl.com/fh2careers3

If you are interested in a manufacturing apprenticeship these videos can help:

tinyurl.com/fh2careers4 tinyurl.com/fh2careers5

Find out more about building your skills at www.skillsbuilder.org

Jobs where you assemble products

Key skills

You could be:

- a car manufacturing worker
- a food packaging operative
- an electronics assembler

Or perhaps you would like help factories run smoothly by being a supervisor.

You might like these jobs because:

You love working as part of a large team in a busy environment. You would like a physical job where you get to use your hands.

Jobs where you work as an engineer

Key skills

You could be:

- a chemical engineer
- an aerospace engineer
- a design and development engineer

Or perhaps you would like to work in as an electronics engineer.

You might like these jobs because:

You are interested in how things are designed to make them work. You enjoy solving problems and getting stuck into a project. You love talking to people and expressing your ideas.

Jobs where you make products

Key skills

You could be:

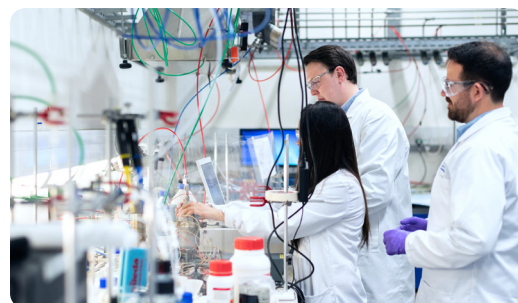

- a welder
- a joiner
- a metal worker

Or perhaps you would like to make clothes by being a sewing machinist.

You might like these jobs because:

You enjoy working with your hands and machinery to make things and get satisfaction from completing a project from start to finish.

Jobs where you work as a scientist

Key skills

You could be:

- a food scientist
- a lab technician
- a product development scientist

Or perhaps you would like to work in a lab manufacturing medicines or cosmetics.

You might like these jobs because:

You have an interest in science and are especially good at planning and carrying out experiments. You are good at explaining your ideas, both by speaking and writing.

